Johannes Roßberg

has successfully completed the course

"Sustainability: How to Become Climate Neutral

a program for key change makers of leading organizations.

As the business world shifts towards a greener future, sustainability reports are becoming as commonplace as a company's financial report. In this 4-hour online training, participants learn how to actively contribute on the path to climate neutrality. This includes:

- Why achieving climate neutrality is relevant for organizations
- Which targets need to be achieved
- How to achieve climate neutrality through calculating & reducing emissions and through transparent reporting
- What sustainability means to organizations besides climate action
- What can be gained by developing sustainability skills
- How other organizations approach climate neutrality and sustainability
- Why technology and digitization are crucial in accelerating climate action
- What we can do to foster sustainable digitization

Through the completion, they are able to acquire the necessary knowledge, mindset and skills to actively drive to sustainable transformation within their organizations.
